Student's Wall

-Slave to the Rhythm-

Ever thought of what dexterity, intuition, profoundness an elder daughter's encrusted of?
What she's made up of...

No matter how old she is,
She'll be the eldest in the house,
She's working for her spouse.
Father feels like an owner,

Outside, she has frantic eyes,
Dying for some affection,
But all she gets is just lot's and lot's of expectation.

Worked her fingers to the bone,
her pillows wet at night,
But all the love's with younger ones,
Nothing for her in sight.

Imagine a daughter having an ardent desire to leave,
the people who cared for her
were the people faking it, I believe.

Everyone keep saying to her,
'I wish I had one like you do.'
But no one cares bou't the pain,
She has to go everyday through.

Caring for her family, painstakingly,
trailing the path her mother did,
But what about all the feelings
from everyone did she hid.

New Spark

Through snowy regions and mountain range,
Their journey never stops.
Working through sweat and blood,
Our brave soldiers reached the top.

Leaving their ordinary lives,
Devotion and love poured in this land.
Our brave warriors never leave their path,
Taking each step in this sand.

As each flower blooms in spring,
As a new life lives longer.
As each day passes by,
They come to tell their stories beyond the border.

As their fights end with their last breath,
But their courage leaves a mark.
Their end is just a new beginning,
Then there comes a new spark.

'Our flag doesn't wave because of the wind...
It waves with pride with our soldiers' last breaths.'

Keep Going

Every morning when I wake up, I look at trees and nature and start my day.
I go to school and meet friends,
We talk, we laugh and sometimes fight,
And after a while, everything just feels alright.
Some days are happy, some are sad,
But I try not to worry much,
Because tomorrow might be bright.
I make mistakes and learn from them then,
always try to be better.
I know it will not be perfect and I don't even try to be,
life is only made up of these small moments,
like talking with friends and family.
So I'll keep going on and on everyday.
Despite when things are tough.
As at one moment everything will be alright
